The gyrations in cotton signified merely that it was a traders' market, yet on the whole there was a disposition to liquidate in this crop owing to disappointing cables, the Chinese crisis, dulness of spot cotton and also of snectuation by reason of a lack of outside interest. The Government report, it is true, was builtish in some respects, showing that although there has been some impros, ment in Tegas, a good deal of the crop is still grassy while conditions in some sections east of the Mississippi are distinctly unfavorable owing to excessive ritus, insects and lack of cultivation. It was noticeable, too, that the next crop showed more strength than this one, bears showing a disposition to proceed cautiously, partly because of unfavorable crop conditions and partly for the reason that the short interest is already very large and a stampede would mean a sudden and a sharp edwance. This crop closed at a very fair decline, but the next ended unchanged after being at one time slightly higher.
